Press Report

DRACCOON cooperates with Avira

Together with its cooperation partner Avira the enterprise filesharing expert DRACCOON will offer an anti-virus protection in their software solution.

Anti-virus protection is especially important in the daily handling of diverse data that is processed at different places. The danger of receiving files with hidden viruses is imminent. The risk that malware is circulated is already immensely high, while uploading files into a secured system. If this data is then made available as a download on a large scale, e.g. after an important company event, the hidden malware can spread rapidly and cause enormous harm.

The German software company DRACCOON with its safe and repeatedly certified cloud solution has established itself as market leader in the German-speaking area over the last few years. Together with the new partner Avira it will offer anti-virus protection in the future. All data that is viewed, processed or shared via the cloud storage from DRACCOON will already be examined during the up- or download by the leading anti-malware. This way defective files will be detected and isolated in no time.
